I will always love it because it has memories of growing up, growing together, and growing apart. I became close friends with Kara (Kate Hudson) when I was about 15. She was a talented, creative, precheerleader, and I was a first year cheerleader at my high school (the same school that I graduated from). I started writing for "Glee" during my senior year in college. My parents didn't move to New York until I was in 3rd grade, so I was always a bit of a loner, and I was raised by my over-protective mother. I wanted to get away from home, but I also felt like I couldn't get away from everything that my mother and her family had put me through. Once I moved to New York, I was homesick, and I cried quite a bit. It hurt to be away from my parents and it hurt to be away from my hometown. All of my girlfriends in the first year of college were from New York. I knew nobody. It took me a while to form real friendships. I was always afraid of men. Well, I wasn't really afraid of them, but I was always trying to figure them out and I would have this one paranoid friend who I could talk to about things that were in my head that I couldn't tell anyone about. I also had this "thing" that I had to figure out—I didn't necessarily want to, but it became like a curiosity. I thought that something was going on with me, but I was never able to figure it out
